

CPSU NATIONAL CHILD PROTECTION DELEGATE AWARDS

Across Australia, CPSU Child Protection members work hard to keep vulnerable children safe and support families. Child Protection services have been under-funded and under-resourced for far too long and our child protection workers need more time and resources to help care for all the kids in need. CPSU Child Protection delegates play a crucial role in campaigning for well-resourced child protection services, and a safe and fair workplace where workers are supported and respected.

This National Child Protection Week, the CPSU want to recognise the contribution of child protection union delegates who are working to make child protection better for their colleagues and the children they protect.

Nominate a delegate who should be recognised for their contribution by giving an example in a few paragraphs of how the delegate is working to make child protection better; stories should demonstrate the CPSU values of fairness, equality, and solidarity.

Nominate your delegate here:

www.surveymonkey.com/r/Child_Protection_Delegate_Awards

Nominations close Fri 24 August and state finalists and national winner announced during National Child Protection Week (2 – 8 September)

Prize is a $1500 red balloon voucher for the delegate to spend with the union members in their workplace on a group activity of their choice.

CPSU is the national union for people who work in child protection

Proud to be Public

Authorised by Stewart Little, General Secretary, Public Service Association of NSW