Have your say for the next National Plan to reduce violence against women and their children

The Federal Parliament's Standing Committee on Social Policy and Legal Affairs is inquiring into and reporting on family, domestic and sexual violence, including with a view to informing the next National Plan to Reduce Violence against Women and their Children. You can read the terms of reference HERE. As PSA members who work in this area, we want to know what you think about this issue. You can follow this link to tell us HERE.

We are most interested in hearing from members who work in policy or service provision in a domestic violence, family or community setting. If you don't work directly in one of these, but your work is impacted by work in these areas, we also want to hear from you.

The survey closes midday 20 July which we know is a short time frame: but your contribution is invaluable.
